Pushes Charter change in Freedom Day speech

REMINING THE NATION that country's heroes "did not sacrifice to create an independent nation where politics takes precedence over progress," President Macapagal-Arroyo said the day of reckoning on Charter change was just around the corner.

"Our people will soon be called upon to make a decision that can bring us closer to the political and economic that have stalled our efforts to take our nation to the next level," the President said yesterday in her Independence Day speech at the Quirino Grandstand and later in the via television in Malacanang.

"The choice is not as to make whether we continue to live up to the vision of our national heroes as we continue to watch helplessly while our political system degenerates and our economy is trapped in the mire of uncertainty," she said.

Ms. Arroyo was speaking to the people's initiative being pushed by the group "Signay sa Bayan" when she said the people would soon decide on Charter change (Dutarte), according to Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita.

CBCP warns of subtle dictatorship

By PDI Bureau

A "SUBTLE DICTATORSHIP" IS ENVELOPING the Philippines, the president of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) said in a rally yesterday.

Archbishop-Admiral Logeño identified the so-called "dictatorial authoritarian rule" as one of several problems the country needed to face well from.

"Without these, the celebration of Philippine Independence Day in this year of Social Contract would be more meaningful," he said in a speech at the grounds in Manila City.

Logeño made his clear reference to President Macapagal-Arroyo who has been heavily criticized for allegedly violating civil liberties in the name of national security.

Ms. Arroyo's opponents have blamed the military for what they said were the extrajudicial killings of more than 600 left-wing activists since she took office in 2001. Her administration has denied any responsibility and ordered an investigation of the killings.

Militant groups staged marches and protests in Manila and other major urban centers to condemn the wave of killings, efforts by Ms. Arroyo's followers to counter the 1987 Constitution and her refusal to agree to their calls to stop down over investigating and corruption allegations.

THE SUPREME COURT YESTERDAY STOOD firm on its 1990 ruling that was considered capital Leo Echegaray to his death. In light of a hearing more over a public statement by Chief Justice Antonio Panganiban that the court may have constituted an irreparable "judicial error" in the case.

"No! No! No! This must stand by its decision," court spokesman Samuel Eban said, when asked if the high tribunal felt responsible for Echegaray's execution by lethal injection seven years ago.

Eban was equally emphatic when asked if the court would try to rectify the supposed mistake.

"No! No! No! This is a decision that has been implemented already," he said.

Talking in separate yesterday, Panganiban said the chairman believe lawyers on May 31 that Echegaray should not have been executed but instead only a penalty of life in prison was merely a "retention of an old opinion" of his which he spoke about in several books written between 1990 and 2000.

Echegaray, a house painter, was sentenced to death by a trial court for the rape of the 16-year-old daughter of his customer last year.

The supreme Court later affirmed the trial court's verdict, clearing the way for his execution in 1999.

Panganiban has said that the trial court failed to prove that Echegaray was the father or co-owner of the girl, which would have made his crime heinous and, thus, punishable by death.

WORLD DAY VS CHILD LABOR

Families of working minors get aid

By El Tap and Manile Rivero

NINE-YEAR-OLD CHRISTIAN used to spend 15 hours a week gluing together and packing dippers to help his impoverished family in Calapan City.

Now he can use the time to do his homework or play with his friends.

Two hundred children like Christian will be able to stop working this year, following the launch yesterday of a livelihood and education program for the families of working minors.

On June 12, the country celebrated Independence Day as well as World Day

Against Child Labor.

"We as citizens should young also should children have to work. A child's place is in school, not in a factory," said Neil Ramirez, general secretary of the International Trade Union and Laborers' Movement.

The ILOUW, an organization of trade unions, recently shifted all the third phase of a three-year program seeking the elimination of child labor in the Philippines, particularly in the garment, textile and leather industries.

The first and second phases involved guaranteeing minimum safety members of the community about the problem of child labor, building alliances with other organizations, and strengthening advocacy for a national government policy on the issue.

The project covers 200 families from Metro Manila and neighboring provinces, like Iloilo and Bulacan. They will be given a livelihood package on the condition that they stop employing their children.

"We have signed a memorandum of agreement with the families, schools and barangay. The families will be encouraged to send their children to school."

Police clueless on latest blasts

Cops stumped by shadowy group

By Liza A. del Puerto

ALTHOUGH A SHADOWY GROUP CALLING ITSELF "Taung Bwaya at Kawa" had claimed responsibility for two of the blasts, police said yesterday they were clueless about the explosion that shook three neighborhoods in Quezon City, Manila and Lipa City almost simultaneously early Sunday morning.

The supposedly lone male explosive in Quezon City and Manila are on vacation, but he has left people very confused in the Metro in Lipa City, which was caused by a bomb planted in the back of a public market.

"The cabdriver that the Quezon City and Manila explosion happened here has been asked to be difficult to explain, but cabdrivers don't pretend to be expert on the matter," said police spokesman, spokesman of the Philippine National Police.

Although Young Bener at Kawa had also claimed responsibility for the June 6 bombing of the Philippine National Police, he was not in the area.

In a press briefing, police said the nature of the attacks made the type of explosion seen in Quezon City and the explosion in Manila.

Help a beacon, save a nat'l treasure

By Cristina Arceles
PDA News Bureau, Asian BureauBURGOS, CDOCHO NEWS—THE ONE: A century-old Burgos Lighthouse (Quinta de Luz) in the Cape Bojeador Lighthouse is not just a lighthouse anymore.

It is also a source of provincial pride as the National Historical Commission declared it a national cultural treasure in December 2005.

Presided on Vigra de Magpantay III, the light tower, however, still sits for almost a decade as it continues to battle the elements that have been hindering it the last 110 years.

The structure is composed of a 140-ton tall light tower, living and office quarters and a coveyard.

Completed on March 30, 1893, the light house was built by Bulwaco (British loan) from a design by Captain Perry. It is made of locally fabricated bricks and cement with cast-iron pillars.

Octagonal tower

Meanwhile, during WWII, through the presence of the navy, the light house is also damaged due to the presence of Lower light tower keeper's house. And it is kept busy by the steady stream of visitors who climb the main steps leading to the 14th floor, that supports the original light house tower.

Parade of the sea

From its top, one can easily take in the sweeping panorama of the sea and the surrounding countryside.

THE ONE: A century-old Cape Bojeador Lighthouse beckons for national treasure.

The tower is an octagonal structure constructed by the National Historical Commission, the base of the lighthouse needs to be strengthened before the structure could be improved.

The building is in good condition but the living quarters and offices need to be improved.

At one point, Councilor Sergio Arceles, chair of the Burgos Tourism Council, said, "The lighthouse is the pride of the Philippines who did research on the light house structure a few years ago the idea that one used to live up the tower that make up the structure was found. Old lighthouses were also found to be built."

Arceles said the tower could plant in past years lighthouses at the site.

"We need to make people aware of the need to save the lighthouse. This is the tower's chief, most important structure," he said.

Arceles said efforts to protect the lighthouse structure were continuing after initial evaluation level for the existing structure.

Symbol of Spanish times

Lighthouse, a symbol of Spanish culture here and abroad, helped revive the tower's most enduring symbol of the Spanish era.

The lighthouse, however, was not enough to revive the tower structure.

"We need to have more improvements, the only way to improve the existing and upgrade it in modern support," Arceles said.

"We thought that by being declared a national treasure, the national government would pay attention to its operation by helping produce funds," Arceles, a local member of the town, said.

He said the lighthouse was in bad shape after being hit by typhoon Ferie in 2001.

"The lighthouse was being under some of the people surrounding the light house were damaged," he said.

"The lighthouse was built using."

Arceles said.

He said the lighthouse is preparing a rehabilitation program, it will submit to the National Commission on Culture and the site for funding support.

1,000-postcard campaign

The project would obtain a 1,000-postcard campaign to promote the lighthouse structure.

The 1,000-postcard campaign was made possible through the "Save the Cape Bojeador Lighthouse" campaign. The project and the Cape Bojeador Development Foundation, Inc. (CBDF) in 2005, the Burgos City Government, the National Commission on Culture and the site for funding support.

Burgos Mayor Benjamin Carapitan said the project of the lighthouse is the most important work in the municipality.

Arceles reproduced some 1,000 postcards, making the campaign, which was distributed to Burgos citizens living in other countries.

The campaign aimed to raise $2.2 million from contributions and from provincial government funds.

It was the second rehabilitation of the lighthouse structure since its construction in 1912. The first improvement was done in 1961.

Inmates concealed suicide bid

US begins inquiry into suicides of 3 Guantanamo detainees

WASHINGTON—THREE DETAINEES AT THE US military prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, tried to conceal themselves in their cells behind laundry and through other means—to prevent guards from seeing them commit suicide, an official said Sunday.

One of the prisoners hanged himself behind laundry during his cell-to-cell transfer in the camp, and had intended to hide in under clothes in the women's clothing, according to the official, Lt. David Robert T. Dumas of the camp. The other two detainees who attempted suicide also took steps to prevent guards from seeing that they had put money around their necks, he added.

The description by the prisoners raises questions about how long it takes military guards to discover the bodies. Negotiations at Guantanamo are also underway to ensure that detainees are not seen by the public, and that some of them had been among the inmates of the prison.

The Pentagon released a statement Sunday saying that the detainees had been among the inmates of the prison. The statement also said that the detainees had been among the inmates of the prison. The statement also said that the detainees had been among the inmates of the prison.

Same Same difference

By Bayard San Diego Jr.

WHAT DO YOU GET WITH half of The Mo'Nsta—the "teen brother" quartet that charmed our kids in the late 1990s like "Miss You Like Crazy," "Girl of My Dreams" and "I'll Be Here for You?"

You get Justin Bane—A.K.A. Clint and his brother, who are cranking a comeback with a new CD, "The Meaning of Happy" under Sony BMG.

The frequent Manila station went in search of a scheduled promotion last week. They also recruited a song, "Without You," with Clint and his brother of Anton Bang and National Artist HFA.

Fans expecting two contrary singers are in for a surprise: Clint now sports a beard, and a sense on his arm. But he does his hair (clint) and wears a long earring.

Being two of triplets (with David), Clint and his brother, now 21, seem to have a subconscious desire to look different from each other.

"It's not dollars and cents," Clint said.

"It's about," Clint replied.

The boys have changed, in the past, but some things have remained, well, same.

Have your brothers David and Scott?

Clint: They're doing good. Scott is now living in LA and working on his own solo project. He's still very involved in music.

Scott: Ever last, he's been working on his own solo career as well. He signed up with another independent label in Canada.

Have your music changed?

Clint: [Laughs] "It's older, but it's still the same as ever."

Clint: Pop with more of an edge.

What are your memories of the Philippines?

Clint: This is our first time.

Clint: We did close concerts and the fans were amazing. It was our first time.

Clint: There was a huge turnout for the show at the East Rock (Clint is Mo'Nsta) that we didn't get to see. It was a huge success. It was a huge success. It was a huge success.

TAKE FIVE
The boys recorded a song with Lovi Poe and found her voice 'beautiful'

CM: We've been based in Bangkok for eight months now.

What are your favorite tracks in this album?

CM: My personal favorite is "Stranger Love." I like the things we did on the song, like the instrumental.

CM: There's definitely an Asian touch to it. I like "Stranger Love" as well. "I Want You Long" is another good one because of the melody and lyrics. It fits in the direction we may take in the next album.

Which is?

CM: A bit more melodic, indie rock, I guess.

What was it like working with Lovi Poe?

CM: We were in Jakarta, where we shot the music video. She was phenomenal.
